Stop Wire Fraud

...protect your closing money

Criminals target home buyers and sellers with fake wiring instructions that look exactly like the real thing. Once the money is wired, it is often gone for good. One phone call, made the right way, stops it.

$275M
lost to real estate fraud reported to the FBI in 2025

$3B
lost to business email compromise in 2025, mostly by wire

HOW IT HAPPENS

How the scam works

Wire fraud doesn't require anyone to hack your bank. It works by getting you to send your own money to the wrong account. Here's the usual pattern:

1. A criminal gets into someone's email
   Yours, your agent's, the lender's, the title company's or an attorney's, often through a fake login page or a stolen password.
2. They quietly watch your deal
   They read the messages, learn your closing date, the amount you owe and the names of everyone involved.
3. They send "updated" wiring instructions
   Just before closing, you get an email that looks real: correct names, logos, signatures and details. Only the bank account is different.
4. You wire the money
   The funds land in an account the criminal controls and are moved again within hours, often overseas.
5. The real title company never receives it
   You find out at the closing table. By then, getting the money back is difficult and often impossible.

Red flags

In the message

- [ ] Wiring instructions that are "new," "updated" or "corrected"
- [ ] Urgency: "wire today or you'll lose the house"
- [ ] A request to keep it quiet or not call anyone
- [ ] An email address that is one letter off from the real one

In the instructions

- [ ] A bank, state or account name that doesn't match the title company
- [ ] An account in a person's name instead of the business
- [ ] A request to pay by cryptocurrency, gift cards or a payment app
- [ ] Instructions that arrive by text or social media

Assume any change is fraud until you've confirmed it by phone. Title companies rarely change wiring instructions in the middle of a transaction.

BEFORE YOU WIRE

Verify with the title company

This is the most important page in this guide. Follow these steps every time you send money for a closing, including your earnest money deposit.

1. Find the title company's phone number yourself
   Use the number on your signed purchase contract, the title company's official website that you type into your browser yourself, or the number your agent gives you in person or on a call you placed. Never use a phone number or link from the email with the wiring instructions.

2. Call and ask for your escrow or closing officer by name
   Tell them you're calling to verify wiring instructions for your closing, and give the property address and closing date.

3. Read the instructions back to them, digit by digit
   Confirm the bank name, routing number, account number and the name on the account. Don't ask "is this right?" Have them read the numbers to you, or read yours aloud and listen for a match.

4. Confirm the exact amount
   Your wire amount should match your final Closing Disclosure or settlement statement.

5. Wire from your bank in person if you can
   Your banker can double-check the receiving bank and account name. Ask whether the receiving account name matches the title company.

6. Call again to confirm the money arrived
   Within a few hours, call the title company back at the same verified number to confirm they received your funds.

Do

- ✓ Get wiring instructions at or before contract signing, in person or through the title company's secure portal
- ✓ Save the title company's verified number in your phone now
- ✓ Ask whether a cashier's check is accepted for your amount
- ✓ Slow down. A real title company will wait for you to verify

Don't

- ✗ Call a number, click a link or reply to the email with the instructions
- ✗ Trust caller ID or a familiar-looking signature
- ✗ Send money because an email or text says the instructions changed
- ✗ Email or text your bank account numbers to anyone

STAY PROTECTED

Protect yourself from start to finish

Lock down your email

Use a strong, unique password and turn on two-step verification for your email and bank. Don't check them on public Wi-Fi.

Watch for look-alike addresses

Check the full email address, not just the name. Criminals use addresses like titleco-closing.com or rn in place of m.

Sellers: protect your proceeds

Give your payout instructions to the title company in person, by phone or through their secure portal, never by email. Confirm them before closing.

Sellers: watch your payoff

Criminals also send fake mortgage payoff instructions. The title company should get payoff figures directly from your lender.

Keep your circle small

Share closing details only with the people on your transaction. Be careful what you post online about your move or closing date.

Know who's who

At the start of your deal, write down your agent, lender and title company contacts and their verified phone numbers. Use the worksheet on the back page.

Our promise: DBK Realty will never email or text you wiring instructions or ask you to change where you send your money. If you ever get a message like that, even one that appears to come from us, don't act on it. Call us at (636) 295-0608 and call your title company at its verified number.

IF SOMETHING GOES WRONG

Act fast if you've been targeted

1. Call your bank immediately
   Report the wire as fraud and ask them to recall it. The first hours matter most.
2. Call the title company
   Use the verified number, so they can alert everyone on your transaction.
3. Report it to the FBI
   File a complaint at ic3.gov right away. Fast reports give the best chance of freezing the money.
4. Call us and your local police
   We'll help notify everyone involved and keep your closing on track.

QUESTIONS BEFORE YOU WIRE?

Call us. We'll walk you through it.

Before you send any money, DBK Realty can help you confirm who you're dealing with and how to reach the title company safely. Buying or selling, on either side of the river.
